VENICE FILM FESTIVAL      Professor William Haney who was involved in ENTRY SHOWS PROF. HANEY      the making of the film "Light and Motion in Contemporary Art" will give a brief talk and answer questions after the showing of the film next Friday, July 19.

The film, which alternates between color and black and white, and was directed by Jules Engel of Hollywood, was produced with the idea of entering it in the Venice Film Festival this month, where it was presented in the Biennale.

Professor Haney has two pieces of work shown and is in a short sequence in the film, which primarily attempts to show new technologies in visual arts. The two main ideas were to inject color into vacuum cast plastic and show new lighting systems.

"Light and Motion in Contemporary Art" was produced and financed by the Esther Robles Gallery in Los Angeles earlier this year.

Admission to the film showing is free. All campus personnel are welcome. The showing will be in PS-10 at 12:30 and is sponsored by the Lectures and Public Affairs Committee.
